THE WORD

“To the hard of hearing you shout. . . .”

The Roman Catholic author Flannery O'Connor wrote the above words to justify using strange images in her fiction. She felt that 20th Century Americans were not good at hearing true Christian words of faith, hope, and love. Instead, radio, television, films, advertising, sexuality, celebrity, sin, and confusion distracted Americans away from Christian values. So, she wrote a couple of novels and many short stories that had a Christian theme. The stories also shouted at the reader with strange characters, odd images, and creepy plotlines. O'Connor used all these methods to get her point across—to stop the reader mid-sentence—to ask questions. In short, she shouted with words on the page to communicate the Gospel of Jesus Christ to her readers.

When was the last time you shouted? Was it in a deaf person's home? Or did you shout when your kids tried to cross the street without permission? Did you shout in anger because you felt you haven't been heard? Do you find shouting uncomfortable? As I was driving to the pastor's study today, I passed a school playground and the children were outside playing. Many of them were shouting with joy—a first afternoon outside after being cooped up during the winter months.

Let me propose to you that Jesus' resurrection at Easter is God's shout to get our attention. The world is hard of hearing. Death seems to be the last word and eternal life is hard to believe. Church congregations are hurting and hospital rooms are full of the ill and dying. Why be optimistic when the Syrian Civil War is in its 6th year? Why be optimistic when there are starving children in South Sudan? The world whispers in our ear—“Accept it. Things will never change. Everyone dies. People don't care about you. Community is dying. This is all there is.” People woke up on Good Friday and Holy Saturday morning 2000 years ago and believed that depressing tale. You will find that many people believe that today.

Into that environment, God sends resurrection with a shout! Christ turns the world upside down and heals our deafness! To death, Jesus Christ shouts, “No!” The empty tomb on Easter morning changes so much about life. It changes so much about how we relate with this death dealing world! We are not passive in a depressing world. Resurrection gets our attention. We get turned on to how radical God is by His overturning all the rules—rules of biology, rules of science, rules of spiritual life, rules of sharing, rules of the funeral home, rules of spending time with family. God embraces us—with our wounds, with our injuries, with our losses—on Easter Sunday! Embrace the Christ. Faithfully follow the death-defying Savior! May you have a blessed Easter in living out your faith.

Grace and Peace,

Pastor Joseph
